PENNA. INDUSTRY SHOWS ITS USUAL POST HOLIDAY LAG

First Three Weeks of 1934 Lower Than Were December

CAR LOADINGS GOOD

Steel and Coal Production Fall Behind December Figures

By James C. Kinkaid
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—(INS)—Suffering from the usual holiday lag, Pennsylvania's business and industry for the first three weeks of the new year were somewhat lower than in December, a survey by International News Service revealed today.

Although carloadings have stood up well during the first nineteen days of the month, steel and coal production lagged behind the figures for the same period a month ago.

Steel and iron operations, however, have shown better strength during the last two weeks although during the first six days of the year business was comparatively slack.

This has caused indices to slide somewhat during the first 19 days.

Coal output which dropped with the falling off of steel operations in the first week, have slumped steeply, due in part to the drop in industrial activity, a drop in domestic consumption and the lack of new orders from the steel and iron industry. Part of the decline, nevertheless, can be attributed directly to the anthracite labor difficulties of the last week.

Production in the Connellsville region has shown considerable improvement thus far this year over 1933, the first two weeks producing 4,220 tons of coke more than in that period a year ago when 20,400 tons were put out.

Electric power output was comparatively steady during the last week and a rise was predicted for the coming week with production in steel beginning to rise.

Rail shipments during the first nineteen days of the month were three-tenths of a point better than in December and more than 20 per cent improved over a year ago.

Slight improvement was noted in the sales of gasoline, fuel oil and kerosene, with a slight increase in demand as a result.

Figures show production in the Bradford field being 31,440 barrels daily and in the Allegheny field 7,583.

Glass operations are still reported at high averages and rubber plants are receiving support currently from the motor trade.

Textiles are unchanged from capacities reported in recent weeks.

Stock markets were more active during the week following the pace set by the New York board after President Roosevelt's gold message. Pittsburgh's activity was featured by a spurt of Westinghouse Air Brake which made a net gain of 2 5/8 on Thursday. Philadelphia's market was marked by the display of activity in Pennroad and United Corporation.

Durham Cave First Found In Penna., Old Map Shows

HARRISBURG, Jan. 20.—(INS)—On a rusty map two and a half centuries old appears a notation marking the first cave ever located in Pennsylvania—Durham's cave near Riegelsville, Bucks County—records of the Department of Internal Affairs showed today.

The ancient map, depicting the old province of Pennsylvania, was drawn by a man named Schull in 1770, less than 100 years after William Penn established Bucks county as one of the three original counties of the province.

It was 58 years after Schull's map was printed before any written description of the cave appeared. Hazard's "Register of Pennsylvania" in 1828 contains a written record of this cave.

When Durham's cave was first discovered it consisted of three large rooms, each about 90 feet long, 40 feet wide and 20 feet high, records show. The only entrance was a narrow opening about six feet high.

Quarrying operations since then have increased the size of the opening and the interior to several times the original size until it now extends underground 75 or 100 feet.

Most interesting aspect of the history of the cave is the collection of bones made there by H. D. Rogers, State geologist, about 1856, and by a Dr. Mercer in 1893. Nearly 50 different types of animals were located in the cave through their bones, one of them, the peccary, unknown to this region in historic times.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—The German government is sponsoring propaganda activities by Nazi agents in the United States which constitutes a menace to this nation, a House Immigration sub-committee reported today. The committee recently completed an investigation into accounts of the Nazi agents. It charged their propaganda sought to integrate itself in American public and social life in order to undermine the principles of an established constitutional government.

CHINA'S AIR FORCE TRAINED BY U. S. PILOTS

Aviation Lotteries Drove Home Government's Desire For Air Force

2 EXCELLENT SCHOOLS

(This is the final article of a series of four showing the trend of events in China, all of which exert a powerful bearing on the burning issue of whether 1934 will see a major outbreak of hostilities in the Pacific Basin.)

By John Goette
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PEIPING, Jan. 22.—(INS)—China is working against time and financial stringency in the struggle to be prepared for the emergency of war in the Pacific which is a topic very much in the minds of all Chinese officials today.

Admiral S. F. Chen, Minister of Navy, frankly admits that it is only lack of immediate funds which prevents the building of a modern Chinese navy to the strength of 600,000 tons, the plan suggested by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

According to the Minister, China must have a naval fighting force of 71 vessels, composed of capital ships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines and aircraft carriers, in addition to an auxiliary service of 34 ships including submarine tenders, mine sweepers, torpedo boats, transports and hospital ships.

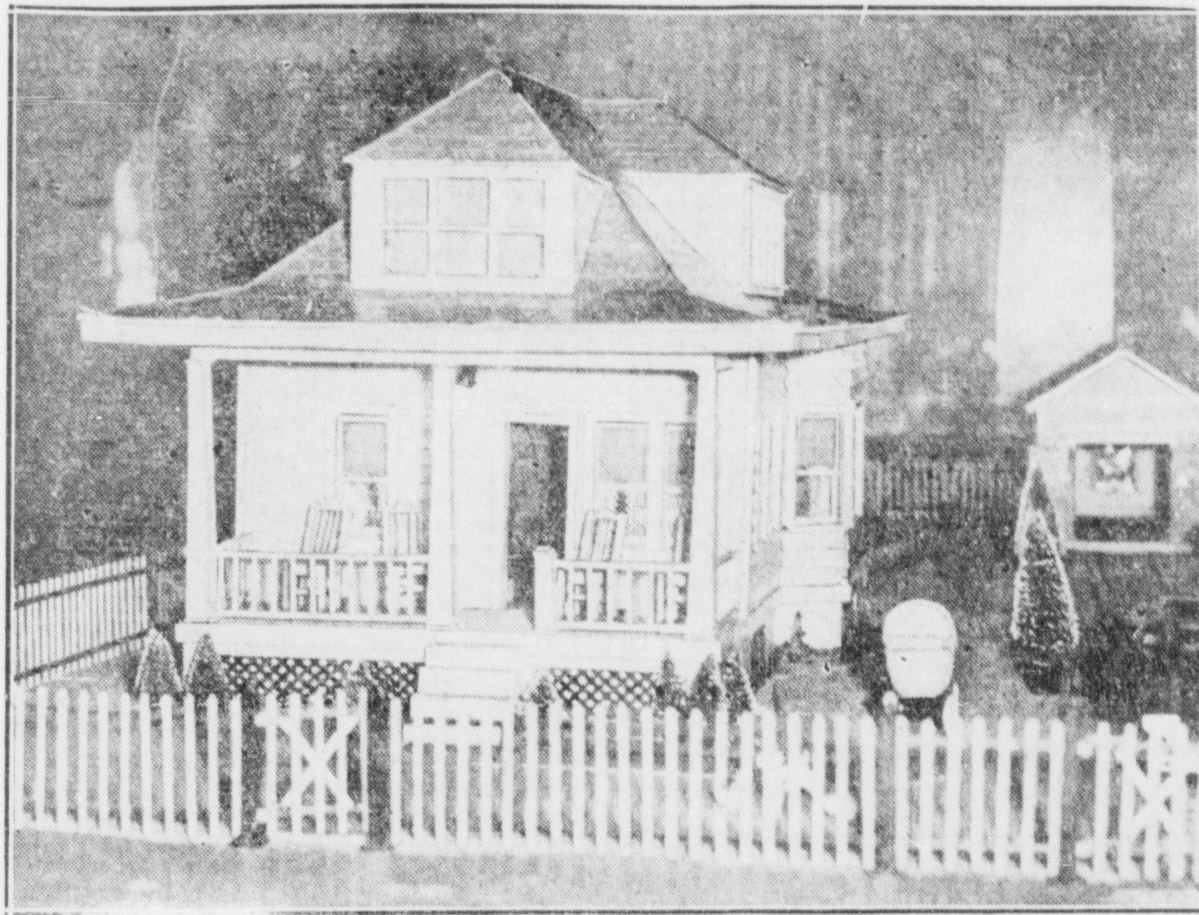

From this statement it is obvious that China is thinking in terms of a large navy. Admiral Chen refers to what has been accomplished in 1933. Two gunboats were newly commissioned and progress made in the construction of four others in this period. Work on the new Kiangwan Naval Dockyard was rushed in 1933, while the Shanghai Naval Hospital was opened early in 1933.

He harks back to the unfortunate misappropriation of the late Empress Dowager, who following the destruction of the Chinese navy in the war against Japan in the nineties, used the money to build a Summer Palace instead of fighting ships. However, he points with pride to the accomplishments since the Nanking government reorganized the Ministry of Navy in 1928.

From that time on, the government dedicated itself to the task of forming an adequate naval force. Difficulties in the way of obtaining funds have beset the path of achievement but the idea has never been abandoned, and 1933 saw the greatest impetus ever given to the problem, says Admiral Chen.

MINIATURE HOME BUILT BY CROYDON LAD

An Architect and Builder in the making is George Gleason, 18, Patterson avenue, near State road, Croydon, who constructed this model of his home in the living room. It is complete with six rooms and bath and is electrically lighted. George cut his "lumber" from cheese boxes.

WOMAN ARCHITECT IS NOW HOME FROM FRANCE

Mrs. M. F. Spencer Will Return To Europe When Conditions Warrant

FRANCE NOT HARD HIT

NEW HOPE, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Margaret F. Spencer has returned to New Hope following a period of 1 1/2 years in France where she has been engaged in architectural work.

The one who has returned to her home community here has been engaged in architectural work in the United States for years, and has been doing similar work since going to France. While the French have followed the idea of housing several families in one building to conserve living space, the utilization of American type of conveniences is just being adopted. It has been in such lines that Mrs. Spencer's experience has been sought in association with the architects and builders in Paris and its suburbs.

As a result of the recent instability of government and the fear of fluctuation of the franc, the people of France are fearful of the economic future and many lines of business are at a standstill. Mrs. Spencer reports that in a general sense the country has not shared in the depression and France has been one of the wealthiest nations in the world. In spite of war costs, the inherent frugality of the people, and their willingness to work hard and for long hours has set up a financial stability that has withstood the effects of the world unrest.

Taxes in France are reported as being much higher and more troublesome than in the United States. Taxes direct and taxes indirect, income tax, occupational tax, tariff duties and many other forms of taxes result in high prices. Then the lotteries are operated by the government as a leading source of revenue.

Public fear of franc inflation, and the fear of German militarism are said by Mrs. Spencer to be two nightmares in France today. Should this spirit be relieved and in consequence money be available to proceed with extensive building operations, Mrs. Spencer will return at once to France, as she is expecting to be associated with the development of a large tract and building work along the Seine River near Paris. Her two daughters are now in a private school in Paris.

Mrs. Spencer is staying with Mrs. D. A. Davenport, the well known aircraft worker in weaving. Mrs. Davenport entertained on a recent afternoon in her honor. Mrs. Spencer is the widow of Robert Spencer, landscape artist.

Bank Deposits Show $18,000,000 Increase in Area

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—(INS)—An $18,000,000 increase in the deposits of banks who are members of the Philadelphia Federal Reserve district was today attributed to the Federal guarantee of deposits placed in effect on January 1. The increase was recorded in the first two weeks of the year, figures revealed.

The 600 banks of the district had demand deposits of $599,000,000 for the week ending December 27. By January 10 these increased to $607,000,000, a gain of $8,000,000. In time deposits the member banks had $293,000,000 for the week ending December 27. These rose to $303,000,000 in two weeks, an increase of $10,000,000.

MONEY PLANS MOVE FORWARD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—While the silver bloc in Congress planned a revolt against this money leadership, President Roosevelt today moved forward with his tentative plans for creating a government bank empowered to issue all forms of currency.

Fire Marshal Stackhouse Speaks of Fire Prevention

NEW BRITAIN, Jan. 20.—Fire prevention was the theme at the monthly meeting of the New Britain Township Parent-Teacher Association held at the Fairview school. A large number of the patrons of the schools in the township filled the room to capacity to hear an address by County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse.

Prefacing his remarks, Mr. Stackhouse said Fire Prevention Week is usually observed in October, but the prevention of fires should be observed every week in the year.

Prefacing his remarks, Mr. Stackhouse stressed a number of points to be followed in the prevention of fires. Rubbish, he said, should not be burned when there is a strong wind. He cautioned children against the practice of playing with matches and urged upon the adults the importance of being careful with the use of cigarettes and gasoline.

Mr. Stackhouse explained that fires occur during the four seasons of the year. It is in the Spring that many grass fires are started. Lightning is the cause of many fires in the Summer and in the Fall very frequently fields of dry grass and leaves are set on fire. Chimney fires, said Mr. Stackhouse, are a very common occurrence during the Winter season. He spoke briefly of the obstacles the firemen must overcome in fighting fires in the extremely cold weather.

Members of the association were informed that the fire loss in Bucks County during the past year had amounted to $453,000. Barn fires averaged more than one a week, there having been 57 or 58 burned during the past year. This great loss, said Mr. Stackhouse, must be borne largely by the citizens of Bucks county.

Richard Hopkins, Hulmeville, supplemented the remarks of Mr. Stackhouse by stating that all persons should be taught the importance of carrying safety matches.

CART 250-LB. SAFE AWAY FROM CROYDON STORE

Thieves Rob American Store Third Time in Two Years

TOOK SAFE AWAY TWICE

CROYDON, Jan. 20.—A safe weighing 250 pounds and containing a sum of money was carted away from the American Store here early yesterday. The amount of money which was in the safe has not been announced.

This is the third time in two years that the American Store has been robbed and the second time a safe has been carted away.

Entrance was gained to the building through the front door, which was broken open. The safe was about in the center of the store behind a counter. It had to be wheeled to the front door, out onto the sidewalk and then lifted into a conveyance. It is believed there must have been at least two involved in the theft of the safe.

The theft was reported to Constable George Seader and Bucks County Detective Russo, who are investigating.

BUILDS REPLICA OF HIS CROYDON HOME

George Gleason, 18, Makes Miniature Building Out of Cheese Boxes

TOOK OVER A YEAR

CROYDON, Jan. 20.—A replica of the bungalow in which he lives has been completed by a 19-year-old boy here and is attracting much attention.

The youth, George Gleason, Patterson avenue, near State Road, worked at odd times for over a year and a half at his hobby and previous to starting the house, had completed some of the furniture.

"It is not just a bungalow cut from a box," proudly states the lad's father as he exhibits the handwork of his mechanically inclined son. "It is built on a regular frame, sheathed, papered and weather-boarded."

All of the material was gotten from cheese boxes.

George is a butcher but not a "wood butcher." He assists with the meat cutting in a local store.

The house is papered inside, the floors are covered with rugs, miniature furniture fills each of the seven rooms, and is in keeping with the uses for which the rooms are intended. The entire interior is lighted by electric lights.

The replica of the Gleason home contains six rooms and a bath. The measurements are three feet long, 21 inches wide and two feet high. The roof lifts off, so that you can get a good view of the interior and the bungalow can also be removed from its foundations. The roof is of the "hip" style with "bell" ends. Lace curtains hang at the windows, which are also shielded with shades. The windows are of the two-sash type and are movable up and down.

Porch furniture, also the product of the skill of George, adorns the front porch. These were made in 1927 when George attended St. Thomas Aquinas school, here.

The interior is divided into living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and a bath, sitting room and a hall-way.

Seven cellar windows give ample light to the basement.

The back porch is an attractive feature on the rear of the bungalow.

The miniature structure sits in a well kept lawn with a garage 20 inches long and 12 inches wide and 16 inches high, in the rear. The garage has swinging doors and is lighted by electricity.

Brick walks lead from the streets and brick runways lead to the garage. A white and green picket fence surrounds the entire plot.

An automobile stands in the driveway and replicas of dogs cut from wood, also the handwork of young Gleason, romp about the lawn. A perambulator stands outside the house to the side, and a baby is rocking in a walker in the rear of the yard.

Asked how he came to reproduce his own home young Gleason says: "I built the garage first for my nephew and then I thought about building the house." He used cheese boxes entirely and his main tool was a jig-saw.

The construction of the bungalow shows a tremendous amount of painstaking work and an aptitude for carpentry.

TWO ATTACK JAPAN

PEIPING, Jan. 20.—On the eve of Henry Pu-Yi's coronation as Emperor of Manchukuo, both Chinese and Russian circles launched bitter attacks upon Japan and her puppet state. China will continue to regard Manchukuo as Chinese soil and never will recognize Pu-Yi's restoration, International News Service was informed.

SEIZE COUNTERFEIT CURRENCY

Camden, N. J., Jan. 20.—Tipped off by a woman's arrest in Philadelphia, Department of Justice agents here raided a house, arrested two men and a woman and seized $1700 in counterfeit currency. Federal agents said Blanche Barlow, 30, taken into custody in Philadelphia, informed the authorities of the Camden address. Police swooped down on the Camden dwelling and arrested Mrs. Ethel Stewart, 35; Michael Williams, 44, and Ernest Hanson, 41.

TO PASS BILL BY TONIGHT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—Democratic leaders of the House decreed passage of the President's bill devaluing the gold dollar to 50c to 60c by night, as the Senate Banking Committee sought further light on the measure from expert economists. Despite opposition in the House Coinage Committee, which reported the bill, passage was believed assured in the top-heavy Democratic House by an overwhelming vote. Conceding passage, opponents of the measure planned only to stage a fight for many amendments designed chiefly to limit the vast power conferred under the bill. Agreement of President Roosevelt to an amendment requiring a report on the operations of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund at the end of three years thus tentatively limiting its life, was expected by those handling the bill to allay some opposition.

PINCHOT LAUDS ROOSEVELT

New York City, Jan. 20.—Governor Gifford Pinchot declared in an interview today that he is confident President Roosevelt is "rapidly leading the country out of its troubles to better times. Business is picking up rapidly," said the Governor. "The effects of various measures instituted by the President are being felt. We are emphatically on the up-grade. Conditions in Pennsylvania," he asserted, "are improving steadily. There are now less than 1,000,000 unemployed in the State as against 1,400,000 jobless last May."

FIRST PREST OF GROUP IS SPEAKER AT A RALLY

The Rev. J. J. Bingham Tells Bristol Group Members of "Values"

AT CORNWELLS HEIGHTS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 20.—The members of Bristol Group of Epworth Leagues were honored last evening in having as their speaker the first president of the Group, the Rev. James J. Bingham, of Oak Lane. The Rev. Bingham is also chairman of the Youth Committee of the Philadelphia M. E. Conference.

The speaker was presented to the 150 attending the bi-monthly rally in the social hall of the Methodist Church, here, by Ernest Helzman, Newtown, group president.

"Values" was the subject chosen by the Rev. Bingham, who formerly served as pastor of Bristol and Langhorne M. E. Church. He told that values change and have changed continually down through the years. Reference was made to value in things material and spiritual. "Friendships and affections change, but the value of prayer in your life has never been overestimated," he told. "Prayer has a great value that will never change."

The value of the Word of God was stressed. "Values increased with the years," he added. "There are things which grow in value as we possess them. The values which we are laying hold of are going to grow, and some day when you begin to gather the things worth while and consider them may you be able to say 'I have learned the art of self-control; I am glad I know the fellowship of Jesus Christ.' When you come to these values these are the ones that brighten into eternity. Place these values above everything else, that our lives may be hid with Christ in God."

The three banners were awarded as follows: Attendance, Bristol; mileage, Bristol; percentage, Fallington; stant banner, Hulmeville. For the latter members of four leagues vied for honors, namely Bristol, Emilie, Hulmeville and Yardley. Miss Elma E. Haeftner gave the reading for the winning organization.

The Rev. Leslie Kiefer, pastor of the local church, offered prayer; and songs were sung by the assemblage. The minutes were in charge of Miss Marjorie York, Langhorne, secretary; while Thomas Chase, treasurer, gave his report.

A vote was passed to purchase a new attendance banner; and a motion carried to donate $5 to the work of the central League office in Chicago. Refreshments of coffee and cake were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

NEARLY $10,000 FIRE LOSS IN ONE DAY IN LOWER BUCKS CO.

Barn, Two Heifers and Two Horses Destroyed At Forest Grove

SAVE FOURTEEN COWS

Two Blazes at South Langhorne Cause Loss of About $1450

Buildings with variety of contents went up in flames in lower Bucks County yesterday, with a loss placed by the owners and fire marshal at approximately $9,450.

The one fire was caused by sparks from a passing train; another is believed the result of efforts by an incendiary; while in the third the cause is yet undetermined.

The largest blaze of the trio took place yesterday at 4.15 p. m., when Mrs. Fred Descamps, Forest Grove, Buckingham Township, found that the barn on the property was afire. She called her husband and he and a hired man worked frantically to get cows to a place of safety. They were successful in saving 14, but two heifers and two horses perished.

The barn as well as a wagon house and double corn crib were total losses, with machinery, crops, etc., also being lost.

The flames evidently had their inception in the horse stable and Descamps is of the opinion the fire was started by an incendiary. The buildings destroyed were all of frame construction. For a time the stone house and a frame garage were in danger, but Wycombe and Doylestown firemen battled to protect them. At one time during the course of the blaze a large buttonwood tree alongside the house caught fire at a height of about 70 feet. This burned for some time after the fire was quenched in the other buildings. The loss in this case is placed at about $8,000.

The other two fires occurred at South Langhorne. At one p. m., as county fire marshal William Stackhouse was engaged in working about a large tin-roofed shed by the railroad which covers a quantity of his lumber, he noticed smoke emanating from one end. A hurried search showed that the grass about the property was afire and that the lumber and shed had caught. A freight train with two locomotives had passed a few minutes previous, and it is believed the fire started from a spark from one of the engines.

South Langhorne, Langhorne and Hulmeville fire companies answered the call, but the blaze had an excellent start. About 10,000 feet of white pine were destroyed. The approximate loss is given at $450.

In the morning at 5.30 it was found that the double garage on the property of Justice of the peace Joseph Keating, Joyce avenue, South Langhorne, was afire. In this blaze the frame garage and two automobiles were destroyed, loss being about $1,000. Insurance to the extent of $500 is carried on cars.

No idea as to the cause can be advanced by the owners. He had placed one of the cars in the garage at about midnight, and states the two machines were in good condition as far as wiring, etc., are concerned. The fire was discovered by Joseph O. Canby, Hulmeville, as he was delivering milk. South Langhorne fire company was called.

Croydon Club Offers Feast To the 550th Couple Wed

Members of the Union Republican Club, Croydon, have agreed to give a "big set out" to the young couple who are the 550th to be married by Justice of Peace, James Laughlin, Croydon.

A WONDERFUL INSTITUTION

Annual report of the president of the Bristol Free Library shows that the Board of Governors of that institution has worked hard and with much efficiency in order to keep the library functioning.

The use of a free library is another of those things to which but scant attention is paid, just so long as it functions. But let the library close its doors and then the need for and the value of such an institution in a community will be forcibly demonstrated.

Circulation of books and magazines during 1933 from the Bristol Free Library totaled 40,004, according to the report and almost half of these were books of the juvenile class. When juveniles are reading such books as are to be obtained from the Bristol library, they are not roaming the streets, learning perhaps that which they should not know and doing the things which will lead them into the formation of bad habits. They, when reading books upon which judgment has been passed and which have been approved as suitable for juveniles, are adding to their knowledge and developing their mentality.

The fact that one half of the books are being circulated among juveniles is a strong argument for the continuance of the library.

While the library is conducted with a minimum of expense yet money is absolutely required for its maintenance.

"The financial outlook for the Library is becoming very grave," states the report.

The number of contributors dropped from 53 to 32 last year. Some way must be found for the continuance of the Library and residents of Bristol, whether or not they are readers of its books, should contribute something at least for its upkeep, as it is a worthwhile institution and one which fills a great need here.

Give to the library.

HUGE MONEY FLOW

Eighteen million dollars a day! This was the approximate rate at which the civil works administration passed out the $3,300,000,000 made available to it by congress.

The entire amount has been allotted, and it required only six months for this to be done.

Although "broke," the administration is not discouraged nor is it inactive. There is more where the $3,300,000,000 came from—the taxpayers. Until congress supplies more, the public works administration will interest itself in trying to speed up the spending of the money it has allotted. Should any of the recipients of this be too dilatory in getting under way the projects such loans were intended to finance, the loans may be withdrawn and placed elsewhere. Secretary Ickes indicated.

Emptying of the public works administration till is a reminder of the huge spending being done by the federal government. When it is remembered that this represents only one of numerous outlets through which money is being poured, a faint idea may be obtained of what the recovery experiment is costing the taxpayers.

That justification will be found in the final results is the hope of every one.

one-fifth of the appropriation allowed the army, says the Minister, who states that he has been running his entire establishment on less than the monthly sum spent on maintaining a single American or British capital fighting ship. He explains that he has been compelled to limp along on about five million Chinese dollars per year.

Faced with this stringency in putting the large navy plan into operation, Minister Chen is striving to drive through a section of the larger project, namely the immediate laying down of four destroyers, two submarines, the first ever owned by China, three cruisers, and one aircraft carrier. That is the construction plan for 1934.

Despite this handicap of appropriation, Minister Chen has been able to commission at least two new ships each year since 1928. This is in addition to modernizing the older line vessels. At the same time Chinese cadets have been studying in Japan, Great Britain and the United States, so that their trained services are now at disposal of the new Chinese Navy.

Admiral Chen tells how the aviation branch of the Navy has been pushed forward. Twelve scouting and training planes have been purchased from abroad in the past few years. Four naval aircraft stations and factories are in operation, while plans are completed for the erection of a new assembling plant, capable of turning out 24 machines yearly.

In his warning to the Chinese nation, Minister Shen, says:

"To all who understand the world situation today, it is clear that China should possess adequate coast defenses, at whatever expense. The building of China's navy to 600,000 tons should be carried to completion."

CHAPTER FIFTY-EIGHT

Springing to her feet, she faced him, her eyes glittered in an ashen face, both hands held out as if to ward him off.

"Hello, sweetheart," he said easily. "I hope you've had a pleasant day."

She fought a flood of rising hysteria.

"Let me off this boat," she said. "Let me off."

He smiled his odd, triumphant smile. He said very softly, "Hold your horses, sweetheart. You'll find you don't really want to leave. You'll be glad that old Bill is good enough to let you stay."

There was a newspaper beneath his arm. Deliberately he spread it flat. Patricia saw her own pictured face, saw a flaming headline:

"Patricia Warren Sought for the Murder of Julian Haverholt."

The newspaper slipped from Patricia's nerveless fingers and fell rustling to the floor. She had read the story of Julian's murder. The final lines she thought would be forever printed on her brain.

"District Attorney Evans late this afternoon swore out a warrant for the arrest of Patricia Warren, who had posed as the murdered bridge expert's niece. According to sworn testimony of the servants, the two were quarreling when they returned to the house after playing in the so-called Bridge Battle of the Century."

"Torn notes found in the missing girl's wastebasket indicate that she planned to break the engagement with Haverholt, which was announced last night at the conclusion of the first round of the sensational bridge match. It is believed that a quarrel ensued which led to the tragedy. Police have learned that Miss Haverholt packed her bag before she fled in the early hours of the morning."

Patricia looked at the fallen newspaper, looked at Bill. He lounged against the door, a cigarette between his lips. His thin-mouthed, sinister smile expressed his utter satisfaction.

"Well," he said triumphantly, "aren't you willing now to hang around a while?"

"You murdered Julian," she told him quite emotionlessly.

In all its dreadful clarity the picture rose before her eyes. The pouring rain, the furious howling of the wind, a man, this man standing outside a lighted window and firing through the glass.

"You shot him like the coward that you are."

"What of it?" inquired Bill, stretching lazily. "The police have greased the skids for you."

"You were in the house."

"Try and prove it, sweetheart," said Bill, grinning. "I come clean on this job. You're in the jam. Read your paper, read your paper."

"I've read it," said Patricia faintly.

Bill tossed his cigarette to the floor, stared out through the open porthole a moment, and turned to her, smiling again.

"This is the set-up," he said. "You can hide out with me until the storm blows over. With me, you're safe. Away from me, the police will nail you in a minute. Do you get it? Old Bill is your friend. He's doing you a service."

As Bill talked on, intoxicated with his success, Patricia's panic lessened and was replaced by cold and bitter anger. Her own position no longer seemed important. This boasting coward had murdered Julian Haverholt. Only she knew the secret of the tragedy. Only she could bring the murderer to justice. Somehow she must beat Bill at his own game. There must be some way. She spread her hands.

"You win, Bill," she said. "I'll stay aboard the boat."

"That's sense," the man replied. He approached her, patted her, half sneeringly on the cheek. His arm reached about her shoulder. Patricia did not move.

"That's sense," Bill repeated. "We'll camp aboard this canoe—a holiday for me and serious business for you. We'll slide down the strand and then slide back again. I've stocked this boat with food and she is fast if the harbor police become too nasty. I paid twenty-five grand for this boat. I got my money's worth. The Lazy Mary is greased lightning in the water. Three times—Bill was boasting now—"I've run away from them Coast Guard bums with a full cargo of booze on board. Yeah, three times."

His arm tightened about Patricia's waist.

"Like old times in the Village," he said. "You ditched me once, kid," he said, remembering. "I guess you won't ditch me now." He grinned, looked insolently at the girl. "But, what say, is it a bargain? You string along with me? I keep you out of trouble?"

Patricia had made her decision. "It's a bargain," she said.

"Then we'll have a drink on it," Bill left the stateroom languidly. He lighted a cigarette in the companionway, turned as though to close the door behind him and then, with a laugh, left it as it was.

"I guess you won't run away," he said.

"I won't run away," replied Patricia, tonelessly.

That was just what she intended to do. No use to try it now. McGee's confidence must be won. She must play a shrewd and gambling game, she must convince him that the police search for her had frightened her into submission to his will. As she planned her campaign, she felt the boat gently rocking, bumping. Obviously the rum craft was tied at dock. She must take flight before Bill swung into deep water for that cruise down the Sound. She must reach the police with her story before Bill escaped. The circumstantial case against her was not important now. She must gamble that the police would believe her story. They must believe it!

Patricia heard Bill's step in the companionway.

Every woman, it has been said, is an actress. The ensuing hour, a fearful hour in retrospect, proved to Patricia that she had talents unknown to herself. Sixty minutes crawled by in a cloud of tobacco smoke and the clatter and jangle of dance music from a never-silent phonograph. And suddenly Bill, who had been so boisterously merry, was drunk, morosely drunk, ugly.

A full bottle of liquor had disappeared. The man had drunk it all. It rested, empty, on the bureau in a ring of dirty glasses. Cigarette butts littered the carpet, had been crunched into the painted floor. The air reeked of smoke and liquor. A light chair lay where it had fallen when Bill lurched against it as he slumped into another chair. Patricia was staring at the empty bottle on the bureau. Bill with sultry eyes was watching her.

"Come here," he said it thickly. When she failed to stir he made a motion as if to rise.

She moved then, swiftly, moved in his direction. The bottle was in her hand. Before, in his befuddled state, he could comprehend her intention she had brought the bottle down upon his head. All her strength and fear and fury went into that blow. Bill gave a short, half choking cry. He half rose, sank back. A second time she struck him. The bottle broke. Fragments of glass tinkled to the floor. After that Bill lay motionless in the chair.

Patricia darted through the door. The key was in the lock outside. She paused a frantic moment to lock the door that had held her prisoner and to seize the key. There was no sound inside. Pulling on her coat, she had snatched it as she left the stateroom—she fled down the companionway and up a flight of narrow stairs. Above her was the blessed sky. She was on the deck, muffled in the darkness of the night, moving swiftly, surely, pressed against the rail.

The wharf was gray ahead. Where were the others? Just then she glimpsed a member of the crew, his back to her, his face turned toward the Sound. Could she pass him? No, she could not.

She retreated aft. The lapping of the waves quite concealed the noise she made as she slipped beneath the rail, held on a panicky second and dropped.

She missed the water by inches. The wharf was secure beneath her feet. She reached the street. It was an evil neighborhood, sinister, mean and dark. But she was free! And Bill McGee was not. He was locked in a stateroom on the Lazy Mary. Would he still be lying inert in his chair when the police arrived?

She ran on and on. A woman running was no novelty in such a neighborhood. There were few to see her. A more brightly lighted street and at last she saw a cab. She hailed it. The driver glanced at her incuriously. To him this haggard, unkempt girl was just another casual of the night. He saw so many. When she gave Julian Haverholt's address he laughed.

"Are you going there to solve the murder?"

"Perhaps," she said it oddly. Perhaps I am."

"The police won't let you in."

"They'll let me in."

He gave her a questioning look. She was a queer one. Well, he had hauled queer ones before. He slammed the door.

It was a long drive to Murray Hill. The length was nothing to the girl just as time itself was nothing. She was only vaguely conscious of its passage.

At length they stopped before the mansion that had housed her for so many months. Julian Haverholt's home! She saw now what the taxi driver had meant. People lined the sidewalks, stood with noses pressed against the fence, chattering and babbling of the murder, restraining from pushing into the garden only by the policemen at the gate. They would let her pass!

Patricia fumbled for her purse. Just then the iron gate swung outward and a man emerged from the garden, pressing his way toward the crowds that impeded his progress as he struggled toward the street.

Clark Tracy! Patricia saw him and she saw her.

Patricia's knees shook beneath her. This was more than she could bear. She stood very still in the shadow of the cab, her body braced against the door, a street light shining on her spent, white face.

As Clark approached, she tried to pass him, started toward the gate that would lead her to the only home she knew, Julian Haverholt's lay dead inside.

Police were there who sought her for her murder.

Before she realized what was happening, Clark had grasped her by the wrist, had pulled her from the sidewalk to the street. Bodily he lifted her into his own car, the low-slung roadster where she had sat so many times in happier days. He was beneath the wheel, he had pressed the starter and those two, so strangely met, roared around the corner. Once or twice she tried to speak.

"Don't," he said. "Not now. You've gone through enough. Presently he spoke again. "I've been nearly crazy. When I saw you safe I was so happy."

"I must go to the police," she told him dully. "You should have let me go."

"My heavens, Patricia. I couldn't let you go."

RECIPES

BUCKWHEAT CAKES

1 pint milk
1 pint water
1 yeast cake
1 tablespoonful molasses
1/2 teaspoonful soda
1 teaspoonful salt
Buckwheat flour.

Combine milk and water, bring to lukewarm and dissolve the yeast cake in it. Sift in sufficient buckwheat flour to make a good batter and set aside to rise overnight. In the morning add salt, molasses and soda dissolved in 1 cupful hot water. The batter should be thinner than for ordinary griddle cakes, so if necessary, add more hot water. Cook on hot greased griddle.

HOLLYWOOD. . . . . Telegraph wires are stuttering eulogies from John Barrymore over the angling prowess of his year-and-a-half-old son.

The tiny Barrymore recently went sailing a way on the family yacht, "The Infanta," armed with a specially made $80 fishing pole, the butt of which fits into a leather belt around his baby waist.

Several days ago in Mexican waters, the Barrymores, Pere and Fils, were sitting on deck. John, Jr., was comfortably ensconced in his father's lap, and he was fishing. Suddenly, the pole at his waist gave a jerk.

The Barrymore family went into action. Grabbing the pole, John, Sr., began to play the fish, shouting for Dolores Costello to come and make motion pictures of the catch.

Hauled aboard, it proved to be a 20 pound barracuda.

In triumph, John wrestled the news to friends in Hollywood. He plans to build a small trophy room onto the nursery when he returns here to make "The Devil's Disciple" for RKO. The mounted barracuda will occupy a place of honor.

Government officials refuse to allow Cecil B. De Mille to jangle his $100 in gold. But the director is not willing to give up his habit of years so easily. He's gathered a handful of antique gold coins—probably worth several times the $100—and rattles them in his pocket at will.

Frances Dee and Joel McCrea have done everything but get a law passed making it illegal for them to quarrel. The latest safeguard is to agree that each shall sign the contract for any motion picture part the other does. Thus, if the film is a flop, there'll be no postmortems such as: "Well, I could have told you the part was bad." And neither will be able to play opposite a star that the other objects to.

Joel, of course, already is under long-term contract to RKO, but the studio has agreed to make this allowance.

Paramount's ballyhoo about the arrival of Earl Carroll seems aimed at getting a rise out of Fox and other studios.

Two large signs are going up on

Wilshire and Hollywood Boulevards reading: "Girls, Paramount is bringing you America's premier authority on feminine beauty."

About two weeks later, the signs will summon 1,000 girls to meet at a specified spot for Carroll to pick 11 beauties.

The studio wouldn't be a bit put out if Fox took exception in the name of George White, Buddy De Sylva, Lev Brown or any of its revue producers.

QUICK GLIMPSES:

Playwright Vincent Lawrence out-De Milled De Mille when the director offered to get him an office on the lot to work on the script of "Cleopatra."

"No office," shouted Lawrence. "I can't work with my clothes on. You don't want me around here naked, do you?"

Gloria Stuart is having a hard siege of flu up at Carmel. For a month the star has been visiting the S. F. B. Morises III. . . . Wynne Gibson is another who may be on the Hollywood sick list. She's fighting off an appendix attack. . . .

The plain band on Alice Faye's finger has some of the gossip excited but it's only a guard ring. Matter of fact she wears two of them. . . . The romantic acting of Francis Lederer in "Autumn Crocus" is turning the feminine stars into matinee idol worshippers. Even the much-married Una Merkel is a flutter. . . . One of the odder Hollywood sights is Lillian Harvey lunching in slacks but wearing her 12 carat diamond ring and a brooch worth so many thousands. . . .

When George White's imported beauties arrived from Broadway, press agents were much impressed to see one get off the train with a copy of "Anthony Adverse."

Then someone discovered it was book-marked at page 22. . . .

Rochelle Hudson gets three-page telegrams from Barry Trivers. . . . Olive Brook has been at a Santa Barbara hospital getting a thorough checking over. . . . And, come February, the returning Douglas Montgomery will be looking for living quarters where they'll allow him to keep a 140-pound Irish wolfhound.

DID YOU KNOW—That Bruce Cabot, one of the most superstitious of the players, always carries a rabbit-foot?

THE NON-SKID BATH TUB

Some days ago at the National Furniture Show held in Chicago, Frederick J. Kiesler, furniture designer, said:

"What the American home of today needs more than anything else is a non-slip bathtub. Designers are at work attempting to perfect a smooth but not slippery tub."

It is a matter of life insurance statistics that 35 per cent of all accidents in the home occur in the bathtub.

It is so easy to suffer injury in the home in such unexpected ways that you should have protection against accidents and sickness that will really protect. That is what our companies furnish at small cost.

We do not say beware of the bathtub, the step-ladder or the home stairways, but we do say to buy insurance protection from our companies so that you may use these home facilities without fear.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

It is interesting to learn that the old time winter vegetables, potatoes, cabbage, onions and turnips are returning to popularity. This does not seem to reduce the demand for the various green vegetables in market. New cabbage is now selling at about the same price as old. Cauliflower is plentiful and unusually reasonable in price. Broccoli and Brussels sprouts are of good quality and moderately priced. Green beans are somewhat more expensive than they have been. Peas are fine quality but expensive. Tomatoes are of better flavor as well as more plentiful than in recent weeks.

Strawberries are fairly plentiful and moderately priced. Grapefruit, oranges and apples are of excellent quality, abundant and relatively low in price.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus as seasonable and appetizing.

Low Cost Dinner
Spaghetti with Chopped Beef and Tomato Sauce
Buttered Spinach
Bread and Butter
Tapioca Cream with Sliced Bananas
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

BRISTOL HIGH GIRLS
VICTORS OVER BENSALEM

By Jack Orr

(Asst. H. S. Pub. Agent)

Last night on the Bensalem High court the Bristol High sextet nosed out a close win over the Bensalem Girls, 24-21. This was the fourth consecutive victory of the season for Coach Delmer's girls and they are still going strong.

At the start it looked like the Red and Gray were off to another overwhelming victory. The Girls scored 11 points before the home team hit the cords. As the period ended Budney of Bensalem put one through for their only score in that canto.

The second period was a different story. The Bensalemites came to life and scored thirteen points while Bristol could only scrape together two. Half time score was 15-13. Bensalem was on top.

The third canto the Blue and Gray kept going and held the Bristol girls two points. At the end of this quarter the scoreboard read Bensalem, 20; Bristol, 15.

But when the last canto rolled around the Bristol damsels sunk point after point until finally with two minutes to play, "Marge" Nills scored two successive field goals and brought the score up to 24-21 in the visitors' favor. And it was still the same as the game ended.

The scoring of Bristol was well divided between "Phyl" Kallenbach and "Marge" Nills, each getting twelve points while "Peggy" Budney was pacemaker for the home club, making 3 doubledeckers and 6 free shots.

TO DEMOBILIZE C. W. A.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20—The government today proceeded apace for the demobilization of 4,000,000 C. W. A. workers. Beginning February 15th it is planned to drop half a million a week from the Federal payrolls for the next eight weeks. As strictly a demobilization operation, nothing can compare with it except the demobilization of the A. E. F. and the army at the close of the war. The number involved are approximately the same—4,000,000. From the four corners of the country, Washington is being deluged with protests and inquiries. Billed down, the questions amount to this: "Now what?" "What are these 4,000,000 going to do?" There is no answer yet.

TO BRISTOL HIGH TEAM

The Cardinal and Gray Stranglers chalked up their first Lower Bucks County League game in the winning column by defeating the Blue and Gray Bensalem quintet, 19 to 14. This hard-fought battle took place on the Bensalem court, last night.

The opening stanza saw the Stranglers get under way when "Man" Gibson succeeded in snaring the initial double-decker in the first minute of play. Constantly maintaining this lead and consistently endeavoring to widen it, the ending of the first half saw Bristol High leading, 9 to 4.

With the third period came a savage Bensalem attack. Shooting and passing most excellently, they managed to tie the score at 13 to 13. As the last period began, the Blue and Gray basketballers shot a foul which gave them the lead, 14 to 13.

However, Bristol was unbeatable. Gibson immediately converted a free throw and tied the score. "Jim" Spencer then got clear and looped the cords for a two-pointer. A technical foul was called on Bensalem for too many time-outs, and Spencer made good the throw. A moment after, "Unkey" Gallagher put the game on ice with his twin-pointer.

For Bristol, Spencer scored most, with two double-deckers and a foul for five points, while Rue, Gallagher and Gibson each had four points. Lukens was the Bensalem high scorer, with four field goals.

HUNT COUNTERFEIT GROUP

Philadelphia, Jan. 20—Attempting to trace the source of what is believed to be a huge counterfeiting ring which has victimized the merchants throughout the East, Department of Justice agents today hunted a second woman, following the arrest of Miss Blanche Barlow, 30, Camden. Police and Federal agents believe another woman aided Miss Barlow in passing counterfeit $10 bills. Miss Barlow was arrested in a store here and authorities accuse her of being a member of a counterfeiting organization.

BIDDLE REMAINS

Harrisburg, Jan. 20—Assured of the confidence and support of his chief at Washington, Eric Biddle today remained as Pennsylvania's state administrator of the C.W.A. Lengthy conferences with Harry L. Hopkins, Federal C. W. A. administrator at Washington, poured oil over troubled waters and apparently restored harmony, at the same time dissipating reports that Biddle was prepared to resign.

Kidnap Go-Between?

First word of the abduction of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul, Minn., banker, was received by W. W. Magee (above), a close friend of the victim, who received a telephone call telling him where to find the ransom note which demanded $200,000 and threatening death to Bremer if the police were notified.

SHORT CUTS TO THE DINNER TABLE

By Vera A. Schneider

Many times the question, "How to make good biscuits," comes up, and a little lady has written in saying that she doesn't understand why the biscuits she makes are never the same a second time. Perhaps, Mrs. K. L. R., you do not use level measurements, or it may be that you handle the dough too much. Or, had it occurred to you that the flour you use might be an inferior grade.

There are a few rules to be guided by in making good biscuits and one of the first and most essential is the selection of the flour. So often we consider that flour is flour, just as sugar might be sugar, without giving it any further thought. But really, we shouldn't do this. I have in mind a flour that gives excellent results in the making of pastries, breads and cakes, but, of course, I am not at liberty to give its name through the medium of the newspaper. However, if you would like to know its name, I'll be very glad to send it to you upon receipt of a request from any who might wish it. Meanwhile let me give you a recipe for an excellent baking powder biscuit.

BAKING POWDER BISCUIT

2 cupfuls flour
1/4 teaspoonful salt
4 teaspoonfuls baking powder
3 tablespoonfuls shortening
3/4 cupful milk.

Sift the flour, salt and baking powder together. Blend in the shortening thoroughly and add the milk slowly, making a soft dough. Roll dough out on a floured board to about 3/4 in. in thickness and cut with biscuit cutter. Place on greased pan and bake in a hot oven—about 475 degrees F., from 10 to 12 minutes.

And now, suppose we plan some week-end menus.

Friday's Dinner

Baked Fish with Potato Stuffing
Tomato Sauce
Shredded String Beans
Baking Powder Biscuit
Pineapple and Orange Cup
Butternut Cookies Tea or Coffee

Saturday's Supper

Liver en Casserole Baked Potatoes
Brussels Sprouts Cole Slaw
Stewed Apples Coffee

Sunday's Dinner

Consomme Saltines (Toasted)
Roast Leg of Lamb
Mint Jelly Gravy
Mashed Potatoes
Buttered Spinach Creamed Celery
Raw Carrot Salad
Apple Pie Cheese Coffee

And since there are no difficult recipes attached to the three menus we turn our attention to request recipes.

Mrs. Normyle wishes a recipe for a currant pudding and I hope the one given below is the one you have in mind, Mrs. Normyle. If not, just write again and I'll try again.

Remember, friend homemakers, I am happy to answer all requests thru the column, but cannot, at the present time, undertake to answer any by mail direct.

Currant Pudding

1 cupful flour; 1 cupful milk;
1/4 lb. suet; 1/2 cupful bread crumbs; 1/2 cupful brown sugar; 1/4 lb. seeded raisins; grated rind of 1 lemon; 1/2 teaspoon each of soda and salt.

Combine sugar and suet. Add currants, salt and lemon rind. Then add flour, bread crumbs. Dissolve soda in milk and add it. Steam for three hours and serve with hard sauce.

(Miss Vera A. Schneider will be glad to answer all queries regarding cooking and home-making problems. Simply address your request to Miss Schneider care of

The Bristol Courier and her answer will appear in this column in the order in which they are received.)

BEHIND the SCENES
in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD. —After tactfully avoiding each other at Hollywood parties, Lenore Ulric and her divorced husband, Sidney Blackmer, finally met and talked it over at the RKO Studio where coincidence placed them in dressing rooms only two doors apart.

In a scene as dramatic as a movie, Blackmer sent a mutual friend to ask Lenore if she would see him. She agreed and, for the first time since their separation in New York, the pair who once furnished Broadway with its most blazing romance, met and spoke.

It was a tense moment. Had either acted on first impulse, Blackmer believes there would have been a reconciliation. But the opportunity slipped away. They talked their affairs over sanely and agreed that divorce still is the best way.

And so Lenore goes back to New York and then to London while Blackmer remains in Hollywood to finish his current picture, "Transient Love," and to try to regain the screen chance he threw away two years ago when Lenore demanded that he choose between her and Hollywood.

"I am interested in my career so emphatically now that I'm afraid to look left or right," declares Blackmer.

Which apparently bears out Mae Clarke's assertion that wedding bells will not ring for her and Sidney.

Bing Crosby has just been invited to attend the birthday ball for President Roosevelt on January 30. Writing from Washington, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty offers to put a fast plane at the crooning star's disposal. It would leave here on the 29th, get Bing to Washington the next day and return him to Hollywood with equal dispatch.

If there is any possible way, Bing will go. He feels highly honored by the invitation and only the necessity of film work may cause him to send his regrets.

Is Maureen O'Sullivan planning to be married in the spring? The star has asked Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for permission to go to her native Ireland after she finishes "Tarzan and His Mate." Gossips whisper it will be a honeymoon trip with John Farrow. Both Maureen and Johnny evade questions and say:

"Nothing is definite."

But Maureen refuses to take off her engagement ring even to work on the set. She wraps adhesive tape around it and covers the tape with makeup.

Though he played it straight, the chances are Josef von Sternberg was having his little joke with the visiting lady at the Paramount Studio.

Introduced to the director, the visitor begged him for an autographed picture.

"My dear madam," said Joe. "I'm not important enough to give out autographed pictures. I make a practice of never doing it. However, I would be charmed to kiss the lady's hand."

Whereupon he did it with a flourish and the impressed visitor went on her way.

QUICK GLIMPSES:

Rudy Vallee walked off the set during several late sessions of the "Scandals," but George White had the laugh on him one night. Vallee and the band were playing on top of a 20 foot high platform. At a late hour, the crooner suddenly stopped his music and called for the inclined ladder to be rolled up for the boys to get down. Nobody moved. Finally, Rudy called an employee of his and the fellow put his shoulder to the ladder but couldn't budge it.

With everybody grinning broadly, the star had to return to his baton. Lewis Stone is having the 15 passenger cabins on his schooner reduced to a roomy six. The star plans to sail from here in midsummer for a six months' cruise in South America. He'll visit friends in Colombia, Peru, Chile and the Argentine Republic.

Joan Crawford again has asked for Lew Ayres as her leading man. Married two years now, Una Merkel writes two airmail letters a day to her husband who is in San Francisco on business.

Hazel Forbes, of the tooth powder millions, has been taking in the Cotton Club with Philip Reed, young Warner player.

Alice White and Sy Bartlett are two other film celebs who have succumbed to the smooth harmonies of the Mills Brothers.

Sandra Shaw made her first appearance with Gary Cooper at the Paramount Studio. Both wore brown tweed sport outfits. And look out, Europe. Zasu Pitts is going to take her fluttering hands across the ocean as soon as she can get time off from her film work.

That Jean Hersholt has more than 100 pairs of spectacles which he uses for his screen character studies?

Chins Shattered by Kayos

By BURNLEY

SHARKEY HAS BEEN UNABLE TO TAKE IT SINCE THE CARNER K.O. LEVINSON AND THE LIGHT HITTING LOUGHRAN FLOORED HIM.

REMEMBER SID?— HIS CHIN TURNED TO GLASS AFTER McLARNIN FLATTENED HIM---

THE CANZONERI KAYO WEAKENED THE KEED'S CHIN SO THAT HE CAN'T TAKE IT ANY MORE!

STUDENTS of the fight game (if there are any), might write a very interesting scientific treatise on the psychological and physiological effects of knock-out blows upon the recipients or victims.

For upon certain fighters, a knockout defeat has a very marked effect. It makes them very susceptible to punches. In other words, that one particular kayo defeat—often the first of the fighter's career—turns his chin to "glass."

Take the recent case of Kid Chocolate. Tony Canzoneri popped the Patent Leather Keed on the button a couple of months ago and floored him for the long snooze. That was the first time Chocolate ever tasted the bitterness of a kayo defeat, and it has just about ruined him as a fighter.

The Keed, who was always able to take it before and who always showed remarkable recuperative powers when dazed by a punch, has recently shown that, since the Canzoneri light, he can take it no longer. The light-hitting Frankie Klick, who is a clever boxer but far from a damaging puncher, knocked Chocolate out in the seventh heat recently. The Keed's chin is "gone."

Jack Sharkey, who could always take it with the best of them, seems to have been affected in a similar manner by the Canzoneri kayo. Since that bout he has seemed to be unable to withstand punches which formerly would never have bothered him.

Both Levinson and the light-tapping Loughran put the ex-sailor on the canvas in his recent bouts. Two famous examples of chins turned to glass by one knockout blow were seen a few years ago in Sid Terris and Ruby Goldstein.

Terris found that he was unable to take it after being levelled by Jimmy McLarnin, while "Rube's" chin was ruined by that ferocious Nebraska wildcat, Ace Hudkins.
